FACULTY OF LAW

WELCOME TO OUR REMARKABLE HOME

We acknowledge this land on which the University of Toronto operates. For thousands of years it has been the traditional land of the Huron-Wendat, the Seneca, and the Mississaugas of the Credit. Today, this meeting place is the home to many Indigenous people from across Turtle Island, and we are grateful to have the opportunity to work on this land.

WELCOME TO THE FACULTY OF LAW

At the University of Toronto, we are a global leader in legal education and scholarship. To be a student at our law school is to join a wonderful community of extraordinary legal scholars and students, committed to inclusive excellence and a strong sense of belonging.

You will learn from our world leading faculty, who regularly win major research awards. They take a wide range of cutting-edge legal and interdisciplinary approaches, expanding the world of ideas, fostering legal change, and anchoring a vibrant intellectual community and learning experience. Studying at U of T Law will give you access to some of North America's most established co-curricular opportunities that will acquaint you with the best of the legal profession both locally and internationally. You might work on criminal appeals pending before the Ontario Court of Appeal or Supreme Court of Canada, help provide advice to legal aid clients in immigration or refugee matters, volunteer for the UN while on an international human rights internship, or help give legal advice to tech start-ups at law firms and incubators across the city.

Our commitment to inclusive excellence and the public interest means that, as a student, you will be part of a community with a wide range of knowledge, experiences and perspectives. We foster a unique, supportive and dynamic learning environment where students from all backgrounds are consistently challenged to think critically and innovatively. We equip students with analytical tools that give them an edge in tackling complex real-world problems. Our graduates go on to become exemplary leaders in the legal profession, the judiciary, public service, academia, business, and much more.

I am excited about the future of our law school. Our faculty and students are well positioned to excel in a rapidly changing world, while providing impactful leadership and catalyzing positive change. By upholding academic excellence, celebrating diversity, fostering interdisciplinary connections, embracing innovation, and instilling ethical responsibility, we aim to enable our faculty, students and alumni to help shape the future of law and address the dynamic challenges of our time.

I hope that you will take up our invitation to visit with us as you carefully consider the many options available to you.

Growing up as a Métis, my interest in Indigenous law was recatalyzed by the faculty and community at U of T which centered the intersection of the theoretical and pragmatic. This gave me the grounding to explore options beyond traditional law firms and work directly with Indigenous communities, supporting and advocating for what they understand reconciliation and self-governance to mean for their people.

JOIN A STUDENT BODY THAT RANKS AMONG THE STRONGEST IN NORTH AMERICA

For JD first-year students, we dedicate the initial two weeks of school to orienting you to your new community. It is important to us that you are supported as you navigate the unique challenges that law school presents, such as adjusting to an unprecedented academic journey, making new friends, learning about the legal sector and how to conduct yourself professionally, and for many, thriving in a new city or country.

Each year a new team of upper year students lead the programming that enables you to develop the strong social bonds with your classmates that will last a lifetime. Our 2024 Orientation Coordinators, Emma, Humza and Rebecca proudly created a warm and welcoming environment that cultivated the exceptional JD school spirit at U of T Law!

We feel lucky to have been welcomed by such a kind group of upper-year students, faculty, and staff when we began 1L. While everyone's experiences look different, Orientation is where we met some of our best friends, study partners, and other members of our support system at U of T Law. Due to this positive experience, we wanted to be Orientation Coordinators to give back to the school community and provide that same level support to incoming students to incoming students that we received during our first days. We're part of a long tradition of integrating eager and ambitious new law students into the diverse and vibrant community that they will call home for the next three years.

Our first year (1L) program encourages you to develop close connections with your peers and professors. We will provide you with a deep and rigorous legal foundation rooted in diverse academic views about law and legal methodology.

EQUITY, DIVERSITY & INCLUSIVITY (EDI)

We strive to create a sense of belonging to ensure that the law school community – and the profession – is inclusive.

In our first year EDI series, students interact with Faculty who provide critical perspectives on the link between equity and the practice of law.

The Office of the Assistant Dean, EDI oversees the implementation of the law school's EDI strategies while our Equity, Diversity, Inclusion and Accessibility Committee also supports efforts to embed EDIA principles in all law school activities and policies.

LEGAL METHODS INTENSIVE

One of the central goals of our JD Program is to train you to “think like a lawyer.” The first year begins with a legal methods intensive course during the last two weeks in August, that introduces you to the foundational information and reasoning needed to make the most of the JD program.

LEGAL RESEARCH AND WRITING

The work product of lawyers consists of words that must be carefully selected based on deep understanding and research. Our experts will guide you through a series of carefully designed research and writing assignments to equip you to produce well-crafted legal text.

INDIGENOUS PEOPLES AND THE LAW

This course aims to address the range of considerations arising out of past and present interactions between Indigenous peoples and the Canadian legal system.

SUBSTANTIVE LAW COURSES

Every student takes one of the principal first year courses in a year-long small group of 16 students. The remaining five principal courses are single-term, taught in larger groups, and comprise of Constitutional Law, Contract Law, Criminal Law, Property Law, and Tort Law.

WELLNESS & ACADEMIC SUPPORT

Let’s be honest—law school is amazing but it also can be challenging at times.

Like other professional programs, law school is a rigorous academic and co-curricular program that demands a lot from students.

That’s why we offer a broad range of student supports to make sure that you get the most out of your law school experience.

Through tutoring programs, peer and alumni mentoring programs, resilience coaching, and dedicated in-house mental health counselling, we support you to thrive in law school and your future career.

JANUARY
INTERSESSION

U of T Law attracts leading visiting academics from the world’s top law schools.

Held in early January, the intersession offers intensive, week-long courses taught by visiting professors offering diverse perspectives on a huge range of legal topics.

I deliberated for two years before quitting my job as a tax manager to return to school. As a mother of two young children, I was afraid that I would not be able to commit fully to law school. However, after discussions with some of the most reputable professors in their field and surrounding myself with inspiring peers, I can say with confidence that I'll never regret my decision to attend U of T Law.

EXPERIENTIAL LEARNING

Making the connection between the classroom and real-life lawyering will prepare you for practice in whatever area you choose.

At U of T Law the range of experiential opportunities is impressive. You can take a course in trial advocacy, compete in an intellectual property moot, immerse yourself in an international human rights clinic, do an externship with the municipal government, or deliver pro bono services to communities facing barriers to justice.

IN-HOUSE CLINICS

Exclusive to our law students, U of T Law houses several legal clinics that offer academic credit in part-time, half-time and intensive, full-time formats. Students can also volunteer. Our clinics are led by full-time directors who are highly-regarded experts in their fields.

THE DAVID ASPER CENTRE FOR CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS

The Asper Centre focuses on advocacy, research and education about Canadian constitutional rights. Students work on leading constitutional and Charter rights cases at the highest courts in Canada and learn how to advocate for Charter-based law reform.

THE INTERNATIONAL HUMAN RIGHTS PROGRAM (IHRP)

Established in 1987, our IHRP serves as a centre for international human rights work, through which experienced lawyers, faculty members, and law students engage in meaningful social change. The IHRP serves as a partner in international and domestic social movements, that encourage Canada's adherence to its international human rights commitments, while training the next generation of movement lawyers in Canada. Students acquire litigation and advocacy experience in areas such as indigenous rights, social justice, climate justice, and corporate accountability.

DOWNTOWN LEGAL SERVICES (DLS)

DLS is the law school's community legal clinic. Students assist clients who are experiencing legal problems in a number of high priority areas of law including criminal, employment, family, disability, health, income security, housing, refugee and immigration and university affairs. Students critically examine the intersections of law and social inequality while developing the professionalism and ethical literacy that is essential to practicing law.

FUTURE OF LAW LAB

The lab explores the intersections between technology, entrepreneurship and innovation. Students discover how artificial intelligence and machine learning algorithms are changing the practice of law, discuss the many impacts of technology on society, and learn about design-thinking concepts as they formulate solutions to the most pressing issues affecting access to justice.

INVESTOR PROTECTION PROGRAM (IPP)

The IPP is committed to a diverse range of initiatives that empower and educate the community. Its work focuses on protecting vulnerable populations who are at risk of suffering harm and financial loss relating to their investments, including the elderly and newcomers to Canada. By participating in these ground-breaking projects, such as community education seminars and the development of policy recommendations, IPP students become active players in shaping the destiny of the financial sector while enriching the lives of those around them.

At U of T's housing law clinic I meet independently with clients from all walks of life on issues such as rent increases and maintenance disputes. More acutely, our team is often the last line of defense against eviction. With the guidance of a supportive supervising lawyer, I provide summary advice, negotiate settlements and represent clients at tribunal hearings.

This experience has broadened my interest in pursuing a career in litigation and underscored the importance of working in an environment that prioritizes pro bono efforts and human rights.

PRO BONO STUDENTS CANADA (PBSC)

Founded by U of T Law in 1996, PBSC is the largest pro bono organization in Canada with chapters in 22 law schools. PBSC's volunteer students and supervising lawyers partner with community organizations to provide free legal support to people facing barriers to justice. This includes legal research, creating public legal education resources, and supporting clients and self-represented litigants through specialized clinics, in multiple areas of law. U of T Law students have the unique opportunity to participate in two of PBSC's award winning initiatives, the Family Justice Centre and the Indigenous Human Rights Program.

For example, students can spend the summer with the United Nations in Geneva, a grass-roots human rights organization in Kenya, an Indigenous Band Council in Northern Ontario, a Toronto-based community advocacy organization, or a Chinese law firm in Shanghai.

INDIGENOUS INITIATIVES OFFICE (IIO)

In accordance with the Truth and Reconciliation Commission's Calls to Action, Indigenous and non-Indigenous students engage with Indigenous Elders, scholars, activists and professionals in classes and activities at the faculty, in the courts and in the community.

You can compete in the Kawaskimhon Moot, work on the student-run Indigenous Law Journal, and have opportunities to learn about Indigenous and Aboriginal law inside and outside the classroom.

You can also gain practical experience by participating in our clinical program with Aboriginal Legal Services, and deepen your academic experience with the Certificate in Aboriginal Legal Studies.

Tawnshi! I'm a Métis Cree woman from Treaty 6 territory traditional lands in Alberta. At LAWS, I worked to research and recommend the mission, vision and design of a new Access to Law Program that will offer outreach, engagement and support to Indigenous students, spanning elementary school to the law school application process.

FINANCIAL SUPPORT THAT MAKES EVERYTHING POSSIBLE

Choosing to go to law school is a significant and rewarding investment in your life. If you are offered admission, tuition should not be a barrier to your education or your career. The Faculty of Law's approach to financial aid is different than most law schools. With less than a handful of merit scholarships available, we apply an equitable and transparent approach to providing aid, where the students with the greatest financial need receive the most assistance.

POST-GRADUATION DEBT REPAYMENT ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

The rumours are true: most law students in North America graduate with some debt. They also go on to fulfilling positions in a range of fields. Many of our students choose to dedicate themselves to legal aid clinics or specialty law firms that offer relatively lower-paying salaries. To support their career choices, we assist these students with the repayment of their eligible law school debt for up to ten years after graduation. Ours is the leading program of its kind in Canada.

Coming from a small town and being the first in my family to attend university, I thought my dream of attending U of T Law would be unachievable. This was prior to me learning about their incredible JD financial aid program.

For example, during my second year I received a bursary that covered over 60% of my tuition as well as reimbursements for the interest on loans to cover the remaining expenses. Thanks to the aid support, I was unimpeded financially, which enabled me to land my dream job. I could completely focus on my studies, extracurriculars and building a great network without worrying about debt and affording tuition.

Admissions

For full details on our JD admission policies, requirements and application procedures, visit law.utoronto.ca/admissions

SELECTION

Our admissions process is designed to identify exceptional students who bring a broad set of life experiences to the study of law.

We consider all aspects of your application: academic, intellectual and personal.

The assessment is based two-thirds on the academic record and LSAT, and one-third on personal information. Our “whole person review” includes at least three readers, including faculty, staff and students. We have no quotas of any kind. We seek outstanding candidates from a wide variety of institutions, who come from across Canada and the world, of a variety of ages, with varied life experiences. This careful process allows us to assemble a vibrant and inclusive class where you will flourish.

JD ADMISSION CATEGORIES

General – the majority of applicants.

Indigenous – Indigenous applicants of First Nations, Inuit and Métis ancestry.

Mature – those who will have at least five complete years of non-academic experience (outside of full-time study) by September 2026.

BLACK STUDENT APPLICATION PROCESS (BSAP)

Regardless of admission category, Black candidates can opt to apply to this stream, which aims to increase Black law student representation at U of T Law.

BSAP applicants will have their personal profiles reviewed by members of the Black community, including our staff, students, faculty and alumni.

You must meet the same LSAT and academic requirements for admission that we seek from all candidates. BSAP does not have a designated quota for admission.

To be considered for BSAP, apply to a JD program by our standard deadlines and procedures, and also select the BSAP option in the School Submissions section of the application form.

First-Year Admission Requirements

ACADEMIC RECORD & GPA

By the end of May 2026, you will have successfully completed at least a three-year undergraduate degree at a recognized institution.

No particular courses are recommended. Almost all of our students have completed a four-year undergraduate university degree. Over the last decade, all of the admitted Mature applicants had some university education.

Last year's entering class had a 3.90 out of 4.0 median GPA on their best three years of full-time undergraduate study.

LSAT: LAW SCHOOL ADMISSION TEST

For entry in August 2026, we accept scores from standard and Flex tests taken from June 2020 to January 2026 inclusive. Last year's entering class had a median LSAT score of 168 (94th percentile).

PERSONAL STATEMENT

This is your opportunity to introduce yourself to the selection committee, help us assess your likelihood of success at the Faculty of Law and predict what your contributions to the class will be. Try to demonstrate how your academics, experience (work and personal) and career goals make you an excellent fit for the program.

OPTIONAL ADDITIONAL ESSAY

You may provide further personal information from a choice of topics we suggest, such as a meaningful intellectual experience, a vision of your future goals, obstacles to achievement, or how your identity, background and experiences will contribute to the diversity of the law school.

BSAP ESSAY

Black Student Application Process candidates submit the standard admission materials plus an essay highlighting why they chose the BSAP stream.

How to Apply

www.ouac.on.ca/olsas

Obtain, submit and pay for the application online with the Ontario Law School Application Service (OLSAS), operated by the Ontario Universities' Application Centre (OUAC).

Submit all required documents directly to OLSAS, as per the instructions on its website.

For JD combined degree programs, apply to each program separately according to its own admission requirements and application procedures.

Timing of Admission Decisions, Key Dates

Your file is considered complete when all required documents have been submitted to OLSAS, and are then forwarded to us by OLSAS for assessment.

For first year applicants, the earliest that we usually review any files, whether complete or incomplete, will be within a week after the close of the November 1 application deadline.

As much as possible, we try to review completed files quickly. For first year applicants, we expect to make three main rounds of offers of admission. The first round occurs in early December, the second round in late-February, and the final round in mid-March. Most offers are issued by mid-February.

I'm here to learn, engage and make a difference. In my first year I've honed my writing skills from co-editing the Prisoner's Right Handbook on inmates' constitutional rights through the Asper clinic. It's also been gratifying to support undergrad students with getting into law school as a BLSA reviewer of admission personal statements and as LSAT instructor and co-facilitator of the inaugural LSPP@UTSC. It's meant a lot to see how sharing my own law school journey has inspired and encouraged them toward their own.
