A. Submission package and author information
1.	Have you submitted your manuscript as a Word document and your completed checklist as a Word document or PDF, by email to the Editors?
2.	In your manuscript, have you provided accurate author names, affiliations, and correspondence details, including an enduring email address for the corresponding author (such as a Gmail address)?
3.	In your manuscript, have you clearly disclosed any conflicts of interest that could bias your argument—including personal, financial, professional, or other relevant relationships—or stated that you have none? Please consult Wiley's guidance on conflicts of interest here .
4.	In your manuscript, have you clearly acknowledged and disclosed all sources of funding received for the preparation of this paper?
B. Required IJGO front matter and format
5.	Have you included a synopsis of 25 words or fewer for the journal contents page?
6.	Have you included an abstract of 150 words or fewer?
7.	Have you included up to seven keywords for indexing purposes in alphabetical order?
8.	Is the main text within 3,200–3,500 words, excluding references, unless otherwise agreed with the editors?
9.	Have you avoided using the automatic Word endnote function, by manually inserting reference numbers and endnote references instead?
C. Scope, audience, and substance
10.	Does the article explain ethical, legal, or policy developments in reproductive and sexual health in language that is clear and understandable by healthcare providers, including obstetricians and gynecologists?
11.	Is the writing clear and accessible to an international clinical readership, with acronyms spelled out at first mention, and specialized terms explained?
D. Citations and references
12.	Is the reference list limited to the agreed range (25 references) as far as possible, with only one source per numbered reference?

Item		Yes
13.	Are reference numbers in square brackets and reference list sequenced according to first mention in the text?
14.	When a source is cited again, have you reused the original reference number rather than creating a duplicate reference entry?
15.	Where a pinpoint reference is needed, have you specified the relevant page, paragraph, section, article, or provision in the text within parentheses?
16.	Have you checked that every in-text citation has a matching reference number, and every reference is cited in the text?
17.	Have you personally verified that every reference exists and is complete and accurate, not distorted or invented by artificial intelligence, nor mechanically copied from a faulty internet source?
18.	Have you verified that each reference supports the proposition for which it is cited?
19.	Have you tested every DOI, URL, and hyperlink, ensuring that it leads to the right paper, and that the pinpoint reference can be found in the page or section you have indicated?
E. Ethics and permissions
20.	Is the manuscript ready for editorial review, with the complete submission package attached or uploaded as required?
F. Complete only if applicable
F1.	If there are multiple authors, have all authors reviewed and approved both the final manuscript and the completed checklist before submission?
F2.	If there are multiple authors, have you copied all co-authors on the submission email?
F3.	If there are multiple authors, have you specified each author's contributions and confirmed the author order in the manuscript?
F4.	If the manuscript includes tables, figures, substantial excerpts, third-party material, empirical data, or case files, have permissions, acknowledgements, consent, confidentiality, and ethics issues been addressed?
F5.	If generative AI or AI-assisted tools were used, have you complied with Wiley's disclosure requirements (see Wiley's guidance on IA here) and independently verified all AI-assisted text and references?
